THURSDAY APRIL 3, 1890.

A National Election-Law. We have had occasion to say more than once that we could not deny the power of Congress to pass a national election-law. Article I., section iv., paragraph 1 of the Federal Constitution provides that the times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in the State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the place of choosing senators. grant of power seems to be sufficient. The only limitation is contained in the "by law." The Constitution provides that the Congress shall not of itself have power to make or alter State regulations; but may do it by law. In the matter of proposing amendments to the Federal Constitution the reverse is the case. The Congress is empowered to propose dments, but need not do it by ;law. The two houses can themselves perform this duty. Mr. LINCOLN declined, we think, to sign a resolution which had been passed by Congress proposing an amendment to President had under the Constitution nothing to do with proposing amendments.

Whether Congress ought to have the power to pass national election-laws or ot may be a question open for discussion. But there is no doubt that Congress has passed such laws. These laws are contained in the Revised Statutes of the United States, and have been pronounced constitutional. Sections 2011 and 2012 provide for the appointment of supervisors of congressional elections. These super-visors are authorized and required to attend at all times and places fixed for the registration of voters and also for the election of members to the National House of Representatives. Also to be present at the counting of votes. They may challenge any vote offered. They may remain where the ballot-boxes are kept at all times after the polls are opened until every vote cast has been counted, the canvass of all the votes wholly completed, and the proper certificates or returns are made or made out. They may personally Inspect and scrutinize from time to time and at any time on the day of election the manner in which the voting is done and the way in which the poll-books are kept. There are many more things named which e supervisors are authorized to do; but these are sufficient to show the power of Congress over the elections for members of the House of Representatives. The same law provides for the appointment of performing their duties. In fact, the law as it stands now seems to us to have some of the bad features of the Lopoz bill. Is the present statute constitutional?

We need quote only the following:

We need quote only the tollowing:

"If this government is anything more than a mereaggregation of delegated agents of other States and governments each of which is superior to the General Government, it must have the power to protect the elections on which its existence depends from violence and corruption."—Exparte Yarborough, 110 U.S., 659.

"It is in the power of Congress to provide laws for the proper conduct of congressional elections." "Congress can by law protect the act of voting, the place where it is to be done, and the man who votes, from personal violence or intimidation, and the election itself from corruption and fraud."—Same, page 661.

We have for months deprecated the pass-

We have for months deprecated the passage of a national election-law. If there is in the minds of strict constructionists any doubt as to the power of Congress to pass such a law, there is no doubt in the minds of Lopez and his gang. The CHANDLERS and the Shermans and the rest of the sectionalists will have never a doubt on the subject. If such a law be passed during the present session of Congress, it will remain upon the statue-book a long time; for the control of the Senate is already secured to the Republicant for years to come. We would fain hope that a few Republicans may be found in the House of Representatives who will oppose the passage of any such law.

Pensions.

The votes in the United States Senate on Monday on pension propositions signify the return of reason to the members of that body. The pension list is already a monstrosity-such a list as was never before seen in the world.

There were more than eleven millions of votes cast in the last presidential election, and yet the politicians of the North, Democrats as well as Republicans, seem to regard the soldier vote of the section as sufficient to overwhelm any man that dares to stand up for justice and right in the matter of pensions.

Mr. CLEVELAND's act of vetoing a pension bill which he did not like was a bold and statesmanlike act. He dared the plunderers of the Treasury vaults to do their worst; and he received a larger popular vote in 1888 than did Mr. Harrison. The Senate seems to be about to wake up to its duty in this matter. Mr. PLUMB received on Monday a severe rebuke for his attempt to make a raid upon the Treasury. And now

Governor Hill, of New York, is said to have vetoed the Saxon reform-ballot bill because of the kind of ballot it provides for use. He vetoed it upon the assumption that nothing can be a legal ballot which was not known and recognized as such at the time the Constitution was adouted. the time the Constitution was adopted. This is not a good reason.

West Penn, Va., April I, 1820.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Mr. P. H. Adams, formerly general claim and forwarding-agent of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company at West Point, wasto-day presented with a very handsome watch and chain by his former employes. The watch is of Swiss manufacture and has been the monogram "P. H. A." on one case, and the year 1820 on the other. The inner case bears the inscription:

Presented to P. H. Adams by the Employès of the year 1820."

Agrch, 1820."

Agrch, 1820."

Agrch, 1820.

Agrch, 1820.*

Mr. Adams replied that while he thanked them for this expression of their regard, yet it needed nothing to convince him of their kindly feelings for him. The occasion was a complete surprise for Mr. Adams, and shows the popular feeling toward him. Mr. Adams has endeared himself to all his old employes, and the affection and good will felt for him is unbounded. His unquestioned ability, firmness, and courtesy will insure his success in any undertaking, and he will always carry with him the best wishes of every man who ever worked under him. B. under him.

> A State Weather Service. Mossingroup, Va., March 29, 1890.

Mossingfold, '.a.,

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Will a "State Weather Service" advance our material interest? If you think so speak out and educate the people that they may clamor for it. They cannot realize its advantages until they have tried it. Nor do they know that the Legislature refused to allow the State Board of Agriculture to reach out its hand and take what the Chief Signal Officer of the United States Government offers to give us. Why States Government of the United States Government of the Uni what the Chief Signal Officer of the United States Government offers to give us. Why should Virgina lag behind? Can we turn our backs upon the development of science and keep step with the march of events? Why not let us have our share of what Congress appropriates annually for this purpose? Shall we ignore the weather, or shall we like "dogs bay the moon"? Farmers, merchants, manufacturers, everybody wants weekly crop reports.

With some backing by the press the State Board of Agriculture, though greatly crippled by unfriendly legislation, may yet be induced to make the effort. What say the Chamber of Commerce and Tobacco Exchange? Speak out.

Yours sincerely, Richard V. Gaines.

German Buyers for Boston Brewerles. that the good work has been begun, let us hope that the future will have a very different story to tell from the disgraceful one which has been heard for so long a time in the past.

A Boston special says: The reports that the Boylston and other breweries in Boston have passed into the hands of an English syndicate are, as Francis A. Peters, one of the owners of the Boylston, says, a little premature. It is true that for some months negotiations have been carried on looking to a purchase of the breweries in Boston in behalf of a German and not an English syndicate, although plans are not yet fully matured for their formal transfer. All except one brewery are included in the deed, and the breweries are to be managed by American directors.

calculated to raise our estimate of human nature, and to cause us to be more hopeful than we would otherwise be in regard to the future of the Missisippi Valley. The American says:

Storm and Water Cannot Daunt Us.—Just at present the South is being visited by flood as well as by storm. The waters all along the course of the mighty Mississippi, from the time it crosses Mason and Dixon's line, have swollen beyond the banks of the great river and are devastating towns, destroying property and life, and evolving gerns of malignant disease. Tennesse and Arkansas, Missouri and Louisiana and Mississippi are especially afflicted. Here the boundless waters continue to hold high carnival, and death and want are the doom of many thousands. But though we are busy just now throttling epidemics and escaping the terrible visitations of Providence, we are still full of vigor and enthusiasm. We will take care of our afflicted, bury our dead, and be ready for the great battle of progress which we have see oarnestly begun.

Nothing can now daunt the people of the South. Our destiny is right ahead of us, and it is a glorious one. We do not propose to let the storm and water more than check us. We have set out to build a future that will delight our posterity, and despite all the annoyances of the character we are now encountering that future will be duly builded.
